

Conflict Minerals Policy Statement

Michlin Metals Inc. is a distributor and not does not manufacture or produce any material.

As a responsible company, Michlin Metals Inc. does support the goal of the Dodd-Frank Act of 2010 to end violence and human rights violations in conjunction with the mining of certain minerals from areas referred to as the "conflict region," primarily located in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The Act was established to stop armed groups in the conflict region from benefitting from the sourcing of conflict minerals in these areas.

The minerals defined as conflict minerals consist of gold, tantalum, tin and tungsten, along with their derivatives.

Our commitment:

- Michlin Metals Inc. does commit to support the efforts of ending violence and human rights violations in the conflict region.
- Michlin Metals Inc. will attempt to utilize suppliers with products that are conflict free.
- Michlin Metals Inc. does expect its suppliers to source products and develop reasonable due diligence frameworks and policies designed to prevent conflict minerals from not being included in its products sold to Michlin Metals Inc.

Michlin Metals Inc. supports the efforts of ending violence and human rights violations in conflict areas by attempting to source conflict-free products from its suppliers.
